STAGE 05B · SENT WITH THE CAPITAL PARTNER DEAL SUMMARY

Subject: Got one for you — {{CITY}}

Hey {{CP_FIRST_NAME}},

Hope you're doing well. We've got a new deal coming together and I wanted you to have first look at it.

Here's the short version:

- {{CP_AMOUNT}} at {{CP_RATE}}% a year, paid to you monthly
 - Should run about {{EXPECTED_MONTHS}} months
 - Nice property in {{CITY}}, over in {{COUNTY}} County
 - First lien, and your position gets recorded at the county so you can look it up yourself
 - You get paid before we do — every month and at payoff
 - And we've got {{LDC_AMOUNT}} of our own money in this one right alongside you
- {{ONE_LINE_PITCH}}

I've attached the full summary — the property, the numbers, the borrower's track record, and an honest section on what could go wrong. Worth a read.

No pressure either way. If it's not the right fit or the timing's off, just say so and I'll bring you the next one.

If you do want it, just reply by {{COMMITMENT_DEADLINE}} with something like "I'll commit $75,000 for a first lien position on {{CITY}}" — and let me know who's wiring, whether that's you personally, an entity, or an IRA custodian. That's all I need to get the paperwork started.

Give me a call if you want to talk it through — happy to walk you through anything.

Talk soon,

NOTES

`{{ONE_LINE_PITCH}}` — one line on why you like this deal. Keep it conversational:

This borrower's done eleven of these with good results.

Cosmetic rehab, nothing structural — the kind that usually goes smooth.

Already under contract, and the numbers have room in them.

Leave it out if there's nothing worth saying. A forced pitch reads worse than none.

"No pressure either way" is doing real work. Partners who feel chased stop opening your emails. Partners who know they can pass without it being awkward keep taking your calls — and per-deal review means you'll be asking them many times.
