Re: {{PROPERTY_ADDRESS}} — true-up accounting

You conveyed the property to Lazy Dog Capital LLC on {{CONVEYANCE_DATE}}. Under Section 4 of the Settlement and Release Agreement, if we sold the property within twelve months you would receive any surplus over our total costs. The property sold on {{SALE_DATE}}. Here is the accounting.

THE SALE

Sale date	{{SALE_DATE}}
Gross sale price	{{GROSS_SALE_PRICE}}

DEDUCTIONS

Total Debt (as of {{SETTLEMENT_DATE}}, plus default-rate interest through closing)	{{TOTAL_DEBT}}
Completion Costs	{{COMPLETION_COSTS}}
Carrying Costs	{{CARRYING_COSTS}}
Selling Costs	{{SELLING_COSTS}}
Disposition Fee ({{DISPOSITION_FEE_PCT}}% of gross sale price)	{{DISPOSITION_FEE}}
TOTAL DEDUCTIONS	{{TOTAL_DEDUCTIONS}}

RESULT

Gross sale price	{{GROSS_SALE_PRICE}}
------------------	----------------------

Less total deductions	(${{TOTAL_DEDUCTIONS}})
SURPLUS DUE TO YOU	${{SURPLUS}}

{{PAYMENT_OR_NONE}}

Under Section 4.2 of the Settlement and Release Agreement, this calculation, made in good faith, is final.

FILL-IN GUIDE

`{{PAYMENT_OR_NONE}}` — pick one:

We wired ${{SURPLUS}} to you on {{WIRE_DATE}}.

The sale did not produce a surplus. The deductions exceeded the sale price, so no payment is due under Section 4.

NOTES

Due within 30 days of the sale closing — whether or not there's a surplus. Section 4.2 requires the statement either way, and sending it when the answer is zero is what makes the mechanism credible.

Five line items only. Section 4.2 says no invoices, receipts, or supporting documentation are required. Don't volunteer more; a partial disclosure invites questions a complete one wouldn't.

Keep the backup anyway. Invoices, contracts, and proof of payment for completion and carrying costs stay in your file. The borrower can't demand them, but a bankruptcy trustee or an unpaid contractor isn't bound by that agreement.

Total Debt keeps accruing. It's the figure from the Settlement Agreement plus default-rate interest from the settlement date through the sale closing — not the number frozen at conveyance.

No true-up is owed if the sale closes after the twelve-month window, or if the property transferred to an affiliate rather than a third party. Section 4.4 governs the affiliate case and requires an appraisal instead.
